Over-the-top action heroics, sticky heroes, and dramatic battlefields. The Paladins universe is a dark fantasy place where heroes of the gods live. Paladins allows you to join a faction of heroes who band together to restore balance to the Multiverse with the power of force. The game has elements of everything from MOBA to MMO and single player action RPG, and is filled with deep hero customization and tons of content. Features: Dynamic combat system: Patches, played out sequences, and special effects make every combat action different and visually amazing. Deep hero customization and a single player campaign: Choose from over 40 unique heroes and customize them to feel like the hero you want to be. Relive the story and choose your ending. Create a new character to carry on your legacy. Make your way through the story through the chapters of the single player campaign or challenge other players to an online battle. Over-the-top action heroics, sticky heroes, and dramatic battlefields. Fantastic combat system. Loads of Heroes to Play There are over 40 unique heroes to play with. Choose from the following categories: Characters - These are your standard heroes, made up from classic fantasy tropes. Stickies - These are rarely used heroes, often obsolete, but for some reason they were the only ones the developer liked. Mecha - This is a collection of fan-favorite heroes from the Xbox 360 and PS3 versions of the game. Side Characters - Often, free-to-play MOBA games are lacking in depth, but Paladins is really proud of its side characters and constantly throws new content into the game that alters their playstyle and personal story. Decent balance in the playable characters. There's nothing outstanding but I would say there is enough diversity in the roster to make each battle interesting. Unfortunately, the game doesn't really bring back the diversity it has had since launch. It's a lot more similar to last year's characters now, especially with the over the top combat system. The customizable load-outs also aren't really impressive anymore as well. The Customization and the Legends like to taunt you. It doesn't help that their stories are incredibly cheesy, which makes them fun to play. The Customization and the Legends like to taunt you. : ER with Dr. Ezekiel Jones Awake in the dark, alert and listening for what Old Timer and I will take to be the ghost of Satan. Yes, I am a physician. My home, make that house, is a still house, which, like my bed-side lamp, is on silent. I live in the dark, but am no longer blind. Therefore, I can see. Distinctly. My world is my home. My quiet. And it is as it ever was. Father, you kept a dream; for I have dreamed it--hallow that dream--and here am I, Dr. Ezekiel Jones. Dr. Ezekiel Jones at home I am home. This is my house, my quiet. This is the season to clean out the kitchen, to see if there's anything in the fridge that still has something good in it. But I have lost some medicine. I have lost much medicine. I have inherited from you the old-world prohibition of overburdening the few with the sicknesses of the many. But this house is overburdened, cursed by over-breeding, overcrowding, too much over-plundering and over-everything-ing, and God only knows at what expense our land is being overvitalized. The level of the water table is rising, but the population's rising faster. I pull out an electric razor; it works fine. I decide to go all the way back to the heyday and shave myself with a large pencil-y thing. There's nothing on the counter. Then I see something glinting on the floor. A fragment of crystal, probably. Wasn't that why Mother had a hand-operated, hand-me-down sewing machine until the kids outgrew it, but maybe moved her sewing basket and darning kit to the dining room and now doesn't have to make full quilts anymore? Look, this is where she stood when she made the softball team, standing out in the backyard alone, and Mom's home-made softball, made of calico and making its way down the middle of the sheepdog's face. The outfit has to be a size 7, but it is, in fact, a size 9. It is completely inappropriate in this day and age to develop homespun quilts that require three times the amount of material. I study the darning kit. The yams are
