The role of dopamine in the actions of the cyclic GMP-linked chloride transport system in bovine tracheal epithelial cells. The actions of dopamine, the endogenous catecholamine, in modulating transepithelial Cl- transport, the cyclic GMP-linked Cl- transport system, have been examined in bovine tracheal epithelial cells. Dopamine (10 microM) elicited an increase in the short-circuit current (I<sub>sc</sub>) in a manner similar to that previously reported for the endogenous catecholamine, noradrenaline. Stimulatory action of dopamine in I<sub>sc</sub> was prevented by the dopamine D1 receptor antagonist, SCH 23390 (200 nM), and the dopamine transporter antagonist, GBR 12909 (10 microM). The enhancing effect of dopamine on the short-circuit current was significantly reduced by the non-specific adenylyl cyclase inhibitor, SQ 22536 (50 microM) and the inhibitor of cGMP-dependent protein kinase, KT 5823 (100 nM), but not by amiloride (10 microM). The dopamine actions were mimicked by forskolin (100 microM) and 8-bromo-cGMP (500 microM). The dihydropyridine antagonist, nifedipine (10 microM) did not influence the action of dopamine on I<sub>sc</sub>. Dopamine had little effect on the short-circuit current of f 595f342e71
