I'd argue that the quality isn't always the same as the traditional "good enough" baseline for the average American consumer, but it's better than most Chinese products from the region. The reason this is interesting for me is that I'm interested in how mainland (i.e. China) consumers view Chinese products. In part, that's because I've got a mainland friend who regularly purchases things on Taobao. So far, I've learned that a lot of the stuff has a lot of potential, but it's not a direct substitute for local/US products. Anyway, you can find my take on the Ivy League stuff on Taobao - it should be more than sufficient as a guide. Yale also had one of the best Chinese boxes so far: There are a few other brands that I don't have details on. Three institutions (brown, pink, and blue) had an interesting piece of equipment: Brown had a shield. pink had a laser pointer. blue had a webcam. And one brand with some interesting-looking stuff that I've yet to see a picture of: Dissemination and transmission dynamics of astrovirus and sapovirus in hospitalized children in Wuhan, China, 2010-2014. The lack of systematic viral stool surveillance in children with diarrhea in China hinders the analysis of the prevalence and distribution of enteric viruses. A prospective cross-sectional cohort study was conducted during January 2010-March 2014 to estimate the prevalence and genetic diversity of astrovirus (AstV) and sapovirus (SaV) in stool samples from children hospitalized with acute diarrhea in the Wuhan Children's Hospital (WCH). Guide to the Toyota Way and Toyota Pioneers. Chemical modification of single TGF-beta receptors by homobifunctional linking reagents. Upon complexing with transforming growth factor beta (TGF-beta), three functional, ligand-receptor complexes are formed in vivo. These are: (1) ligand-receptor complexes forming in mesenchymal cells as heterotetramers of two low-affinity, Type I (receptor-I) receptors and one high-affinity, Type II (receptor-II) receptor, (2) ternary Type I-II-I complexes formed in epithelial cells and (3) Type II-ligand-receptor complexes that are stable in the absence of lig
