Private File Sender sends files directly to your browser, without storing them anywhere. Achieving file uploads securely is not an easy task. We are happy to present you with an application that actually solves the problem. Private File Sender by Ertons can be used to transfer files securely between your devices in just one click. Easy to use and cost-effective After installing Private File Sender by Ertons, simply copy and paste the URL you obtain in the browser's address bar. The file upload procedure starts and then you can immediately download the file from wherever it has been sent. The software has been developed in such a way that it hides any portion of the process from the end-user. Security of the process is guaranteed by generating a random link, which is not static in any way. This link expires in a few seconds. After that, it loses its authenticity. I tried it and liked it. As it seems, the app has not been the target of security attacks, this implies that it is trustworthy. The developers have added a welcome screen that shows the all important licence, along with the name of the app. The price is affordable, as there is no monthly fee or limit on the amount of transfers, meaning that you can easily use the app for the whole year. What makes the app more interesting is its cross-platform compatibility. You can download it for Windows, Mac, iOS and Android. The interface is straightforward and allows you to upload a file right away. Then, once the link is generated you can download it directly from the app. The process is quite simple to use and you have the chance to leave the app for a few seconds, as the window pops up automatically once the file transfer is ready. I am delighted to have shared my review with you all.Q: WCF ServiceHost not binding to HTTPS I have a WCF Service that has been deployed on IIS, and is accessible via both HTTPS and HTTP. When I use the service reference tool, it successfully outputs the types and methods within the service, but when I call a method, it hangs. When I use Fiddler to inspect the request/response, I see that the client uses HTTP even if the server is bound to HTTPS. I thought that ServiceHostFactory.CreateServiceHost might automatically redirect HTTP to HTTPS, but it looks like it isn't the case for me, even though I've bound the service to the HTTPS protocol.
