What's new in Cub Gym:

's voice, and the sound of wine spills froze over the table into place. "Hear it, Alice thought _... and then we came home at last. All afternoon. All night. Our lives had changed forever: From bad girls we'd become real women * * * And as if they didn't want us any longer, they exiled us to the cellar. Our visas wouldn't be renewed. We wouldn't be allowed to play at the circus. We were banished to a cell built for mere felons. * * * Who'd been the children of our mama's friends the circus clowns? Was it me or Benoît? Who'd taken care of us as babies, at seven, at twenty? Did one of us take care of the other, at seven, at twenty? Did anyone love us well while we were still young? And if we ever dreamt of home and family, in our captured cellar, did we hear it on the other side of the door? Were we ever so sad? Did we begin to die the very day that their mother and her white children were murdered? Will our story's ending be known with good or bad news? * * * It's like in the Old Testament. When you've been chosen to bring the new Age, at seven, at twenty. What are you waiting for? You're in the cellar the whole day long. And still they wait, they keep waiting, they leave you totally unprepared. * * * Whatever happened to poor Benoît, that brave little boy? When did his life take its turn into a separate way? Is the reason some deep sorrow that was never spoken of? Why was the cellar only meant for our caretaker, our mother-love: When we got home, home was where we wanted to come, with our desperate mama who comes back
