This can be done in a number of different ways, but we'll be focusing on the most straightforward way. There is no real difference between opening a connection in simulated environment and opening a connection in a physical environment. The point is just that it's a little harder to observe what's going on when you're trying to prove the concept of TCP/IP. In this case, we are connected in a simulated environment. First, we need to enable DHCP on the firewall by going to the Firewall all page and checking the "Enable" checkbox for DHCP (see screenshot 1). After that, we can go back to the main page and create a new connection. This is what the page looks like (see screenshot 2). After that, we can click on the "Add Local Connection" button to open the connection creation page (see screenshot 3). After that, we can enter our IP address and click on the "Ok" button to open the connection settings page (see screenshot 4). Now, we can go to the interface. We need to make sure that we disable IPv6 (see screenshot 5). We'll also need to make sure that the interface is set to point to the correct subnet. Click on the "Public Router (Route)" tab (see screenshot 6). We need to set the interface to point to the correct subnet. The subnet we need to point to is 172.16.100.0. We need to go to the "IP Address" tab (see screenshot 7). After that, we need to go to the "Netmask" tab (see screenshot 8). We need to set the netmask to 255.255.240.0. The rest of the options are self-explanatory. The only difference between this and a physical environment is that you don't have a switch here. You will need to have a switch for a simulated environment. How to test an interface in a simulated environment To test an interface, we can go to the interface by clicking on the "Show Devices" button on the interface page. You will see the interface page, and you will notice that the routing is set to the default route. How to use VPN on Windows In this section, we will discuss how to use VPN on Windows. First of all, we need to download the client software. We need to install the client software on the desktop computer. Sec8ef588b
