GizmoFreeware.org. Q: Azure AD App authentication with multiple organizations I have a web app that we are moving to Azure Active Directory (Azure AD). We currently have two Organizations, A and B. In A we have a microservice that authenticates with Azure AD to retrieve the user's token. The token is then used to login to the main application (webapp). My question is, if I move to Azure AD, how do I get Azure AD to authenticate the user with Organization A and not B. Should I just add in another app registration for A in the Azure portal and then have my web app call into that to retrieve the token. I feel like this isn't a good idea as it would then be possible for a user to login to both A and B with the same token. I'm looking to have my web app, when authenticated to A, authenticate with A's Azure AD app. Is this possible? A: You will need to add the A app registration as a target app in your web app registration and configure it as an 'external authentication source' as described here. Your webapp will then call the A app to authenticate.

Q: 2D Array to 3D Array I am working on a project which takes a 2D array as input and produces an array of arrays which is again 2D array of doubles. The values in the main array are used to find the corresponding values in the sub array and are multiplied together. The problem that I am facing is that some of the numbers in the sub array are not present in the main array and I am getting an array of negative numbers instead. The code that I am using to find these numbers is:

double array [16][3] = { {0, 0, 0}, {0, 1, 0}, {0, 2, 0}, {0, 3, 0}, {1, 0, 0}, {1, 1, 0}, {1, 2, 0}, {1, 3, 0},
