KEYMACRO provides macro support to existing autohotkey projects. You can define and use your own macros with ease and without the need to install additional software.

COMMAND Description: Common on different platforms, the COMMAND command is used to give a name to a function, which makes it easier to call it from the command line, scripts, or macros. It works in a similar way to the FUNCTION command.

TAB Description: The TAB command allows you to start and end a line with a tab character. This is useful for lining up complex lines.

How it works: By adding the below code snippet to your.ahk file, you can define a macro that calls a command. This can be used to create your own basic commands that execute a certain action on pressing a key. You can assign any name you want to the macro function, as well as the shortcut key. If the MACRO command has any parameters, they must be passed to it as arguments. A full list of parameters, including that of special keys, can be found in the Help file.

Usage Examples: You can use the commands in different ways:

1. To make a key stroke assignment: Macro Key,, Example: Macro AddCommand, "/wait, 300, Add" You can also create a shorthand for a certain key sequence.
2. To have a special key bind to a function. Macro ,, Example: Macro W,C,3,/MyFunction Can also be used with SysKey, WinKey, and CtrlKey to be the shortcut key.

Macro's are great but sometimes you have to jump through some hoops to get it to work as you want. The Macro Key Utility will help you out here. With this application you can do a LOT of cool stuff with macros. Sample Features: - Macros for keystrokes - Macros for hotstrings - Customize hotkeys - Macros for special keys - A Quick Search tab to find any Macro - Dynamic input method for Macros - Key event log for each Keystroke - Macro debug (for debug macros and hotkeys) - Macro history tab for easy creation - Macro and Keybindings can be saved/loaded from a text file - Multi line hotstrings (hotstrings) - Multi Easy Setup Creator is a free tool to create Windows Setup or other software installer packages. It allows you to create and customize the installation process quickly and easily and save your time and money. It can create an exe-based Windows Setup, an ns-based Windows Setup, a... Few days ago I came across a very interesting video about an app that allows you to do a reverse search of keywords you typed into Google. The app is called Grepag. You can see it at: and you can test it here. I really liked the functionality and because it is a great tool for keeping a good memory of interesting searches, I decided to give it a try and created a handy shortcut on my desktop to speed it up. It does its work in a similar fashion to Google, by replacing the space after each word with a plus sign and then typing the words you want to search for on the next line. I am always looking for useful resources, and I found this one really helpful for keeping all my searches in one place. Next time, I'll show you how to create your own apps from scratch and how to use custom keyboards in Windows. Today I will be showing you how to create and use a customized key for Windows. Creating a Key When you are creating a key, you will have to go through three steps: * Create a keyboard layout. * Create a custom key using the layout you just created. * Create a hotkey. Creating a keyboard layout is easy, you simply go to Start and search for "keyboard layout" or you can visit Microsoft's website and use their keyboard tool. Once you have your layout selected, you can create a new custom key. You can also edit and customize an existing one. When you are done with the layout, it is time to create a hotkey. Go back to the Microsoft website and click on the option "Create Hotkey" You will have to pick the layout that you just created and then choose a name. It is possible to give it a shortcut, but I usually use the layout name because it is more descriptive. This brings you back to the Create Hotkey tool. When you have the key that you want to use for the layout, you can click on it to choose the value that you want to use for it. I usually use 0 because that's what makes it the default key for the layout. It is now time to add the hotkey to the application you want to use the key in. You can access the hotkey dialog box by clicking on the "Create Hotkey" button And you can finally click on "Create hotkey" to use the key Your custom key is
