I am the proud owner now of Adobe Photoshop CS6, CS6 Extended, CS6 and the CS6 Master Collection. I've been using the programs for years but not on a regular basis. I agree with the other reviews that the newer version is way better than the older version. I STILL have all the same settings spread out into different folders. The new version allows you to see your settings without having to open the tool you're using. I took my time and just went through the maintenance settings and found a lot I did not use. I was surprised that I did not use the Wacom pen tablet settings. I do use the tablet but I could not find it in the menu. I did find a folder that let me have several types of input devices and I was able to use some. I was also able to readjust my display lites and even make my screen wider. All of the old issues are gone with the new version. If you click on the Creative Cloud link you can upgrade to this new version for a very reasonable price. I have worked with quite a few graphics workstations over the years and I have come to prefer the PDF workflow, probably because it makes the most sense to me. In every other workflow, the raw creation and editing process is so fragmented, and so much of the time is spent, that I often end up working effectively without a clue as to what the final content will look like. For me, this creates a lot of anxiety where everything is driven by my memory. In the documents workflow, you are in complete control of the document and able to make as many changes as you wish before handing it off to an InDesign, Acrobat or another publisher. You are able to view, check and, if necessary update the content and look at it side on for tweaks.
