First day I bought this and had it transferred to my Sony BluRay player (I only have a small TV).Just weeks before the midterm elections, the $24 trillion federal stimulus package created in the wake of the Great Recession is starting to have an impact. Only about a fifth of the relief money will be spent this year. The bulk is set to flow in 2014 and 2015. The government has started picking winners and losers in much of the spending. State governments, for example, have fared better than most in the funding process, with just $7.7 billion spent on grants so far. Other states that are competing for money have been frustrated, particularly with the selection of recipient communities. "This is a loser-maker," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. "This is killing the rural economy in my state. There's a reason why Iowa is the number one agricultural state." Out of the $24 billion in stimulus funds, $10 billion is being split among five federal agencies to allow them to distribute money directly to states and local communities. At the same time, $6 billion is being divided among 36 state-based distribution mechanisms, led by the Housing and Urban Development Department. The other $8 billion is being directed to a national network of Community Development Block Grants, which are split among more than 30 federal agencies.
